What Is An Orgone Shooter-Charger Box?

An Orgone Shooter-Charger Box is a small version of the larger orgone accumulator.

It is constructed around a wood frame and made of layers of thick, naturally energetic sheep's wool batting alternating with carbon steel wool. The inside is lined with galvanized carbon steel sheet and the outside is covered in formaldehyde-free fiber board.

The function of the Shooter-Charger is two-fold:

The Shooter: NEW! Orgonics now uses a medical grade stainless steel funnel for the Shooter apparatus: a 4 foot hollow steel cable, covered with acrylic felt, is inserted into the accumulator box through a hole either in the top or front. Attached to the other end of the cable is the medical grade stainless steel funnel layered with orgone accumulating acrylic felt and steel wool. This set-up draws concentrated orgone energy from inside the accumulator box, through the cable, and out the funnel where this energy can be directed on parts of the body, on animals, or plants; where ever a localized irradiation of orgone energy is wanted.

The Charger: The lid or door of the box can be opened, and items can be placed inside the accumulator box, making it a "Charger" for experimentally charging items with orgone energy. Water, wine, food, seeds, seed sprouts, plants, cosmetics, clothing, even dishes are some of the things that people have experimentally charged with orgone energy.

The Shooter-Charger Boxes can develop an orgone energy field around them, and therefore should be stored in an area free of orgone-irritating energy fields such as old-style CRT TVs and computers, fluorescent lights, or microwave ovens and not within 25 miles of a nuclear reactor. The interior of galvanized steel can be wiped down with water to quickly and easily restore a fresh orgone charge. They should also be placed in an area that has good ventilation or taken outside in the sun and fresh air to occasionally renew their charge.

The units come with instructional booklets.
